

Best of the Rest

Greek Islands:

If you dream of spending days on white sandy beaches and swimming in clear blue seas, head visit.

straight for Greece. With a bounty of ancient ruins you won't be short on culture either. Paros, Santorini, Crete and Samos are all worth a Fly with Aer Lingus from Dublin to Athens, jump on a bus to the port (Pireaus), catch a ferry and island-hop to your heart's content!

Dubrovnik, Croatia:

Known as 'The pearl of the Adriatic', Dubrovnik's old town is truly stunning. It has been a world heritage site since 1979 and boasts some truly beautiful marble buildings. The people are warm and friendly and the food's great too.

Fly with Aer Lingus from Dublin to Dubrovnik.

Malta:

At just 300 square kilometres, Malta is one of Europe's smallest countries, yet still has lots to offer tourists. The nightlife there is great and prices are very reasonable. By day, many tourists hire bikes and cycle around this tiny Mediterranean island.

Fly with Ryanair from Dublin to Valetta.

Riga, Latvia:

If you are looking for something different, the Baltic countries have a lot to offer. Riga is like a European capital but with a Russian twist. The old town is really stunning, yet the outskirts of the city hold many reminders of the city's soviet past. It's a fascinating place to visit and great value for money.

Fly with Ryanair from Dublin to Riga

Portugal:

Portugal is a country where old meets new. Traditional fishing villages and women in old fashioned dress can be found in the countries major cities. Winding cobbled streets lead visitors to new, modern parts of town. The country is famous for its beaches, sea food, and golf.

Fly with Aer Lingus and Ryanair to various destinations.

The Costa del Sol, Spain:

Europe's holiday destination! The 'Costa' is dotted with resorts, towns and beaches of all shapes and sizes. Marbella has a beautiful old town while Puerto Banus is full of flash cars and yachts! Sun yourself almost all year round.

Both Ryanair and Aer Lingus fly into Malaga from Dublin and Belfast.

Monaco:

A tiny principality in the south of France. Royalty, celebs, high-rollers, yachts and super cars, this is the playground of the rich and famous. The land where grace Kelly became a princess and where once a year the streets become the world's most famous race-track for the Monaco Grand Prix.

Aer Lingus and Ryanair fly to Nice.

Scandinavia:

This consists of Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland. Home of the Northern Lights.

Scandinavia's most famous export may arguably be the Vikings. Pop along in winter and you may not see much daylight, but you may bump into Santa Claus. Vibrant modern cities await the eager traveller.

Regular flights from Dublin and Belfast.